Assistant Professor of English, Government Degree College, Jammikunta, Satavahana University, Telangana State, India

ABSTRACT
Present study was conducted to explore the fault proofs in the examination pattern in General English question paper for the undergraduate level students of Satavahana University, Telangana State. The examination pattern is highly nominal to score marks of the students instead of focusing on their skills. In order to find out the realistic things, five items questionnaire were developed through standardized procedure. The psychometric of this questionnaire was concluded through statistical analysis on a sample of 100 students. Collected data was analyzed and percentages. Result was shown that overall Satavahana University students want the present examination pattern must be changed.

Keywords: English language, syllabus of Degree General English, examination pattern

Examination question papers must test the subject of students. They might have set by subject experts from the prescribed textbooks and sometimes non-textual also. The study was conducted to tries out the fault proofs in the examination pattern in General English question paper for the undergraduate level students of Satavahana University, Telangana State. It focuses on fake evaluation, present situation of methods of evaluation and absence of comprehensible objectives. Lecturers argue that the present examination pattern must be changed as it does not focus on student’s communication skills. There is no scope for the students to improve language skills. The current pattern is available much based on asking the students to write short notes in the examination. The answer for the all the questions require the memory power of the students. It highly involves the skill of recalling what has been remembered about the prose and poetry. Indeed, test in literature should examine the capability of the students in different dimensions. Every item is to be tested individually, qualitatively and systematically depending on the objectives of English language teaching but Indian education system doesn’t give much weight to skills and knowledge of the students. For example the parents of the students want that their children should get more marks and should be at top position even though they don’t have skills and knowledge. They give more significance to marks rather than subject. In this way all the decisions with regard to the ability of a student are made on the basis of a set of final examinations. As early as in 1966, the Kothari Commission rightly captured the crux of the issue. “In the present system, when the future of the students is totally decided by one external examination at the end of the year, they pay minimum attention to the teaching, do little independent study through most of the academic year and prepare desperately for the final examination” (Panchamukhi, 318-319).

Statement of the Problem:
Identify the fault proofs in the examination pattern in General English question paper for the undergraduate level of Satavahana University, Telangana State.

Objectives of the Study:

the students answered that it helps them to understand paragraphs and the rest of the students replied that the comprehensions are not at all useful as they are completely taken from the textbook and the students argue that they have already known about the text and answers.

Conclusion

The study spotlighted on the assessment of the examination pattern of Satavahana University for the undergraduate levels students. The psychometric of this questionnaire was concluded through statistical analysis on a sample of 100 students. Collected data was analyzed and percentages. Examination question paper setters must keep all the objectives in their minds rather than depending on the pattern of old papers. One can surely criticize that Satavahana University examination pattern for undergraduate level is surely a fail show. Teaching should not certainly be governed by the examinations; especially language skills can’t be tested. Most of the students as well as lecturers are not satisfied with the present examination pattern because it focused on short type questions and traditional grammar. Indeed essay type questions don’t test the literary input of the students. 71 % of the students answered that they do not like essay type question as they don’t make the students improve their knowledge and encourage them to by-heart the lessons. The research brings out that the grammar items from the question papers are not useful as there is no practical grammar. Since comprehensions are being given from the prescribed textbook, there is no scope for reading and improve the language skills. Thus the question paper does not test the knowledge of the students.
